Vietnam

Washington, November 9 — Defense Department officials report that a final accounting shows that the Communists captured more than 1.7 million small arms supplied by the United States, about 1,000 aircraft, and 130,000 tons of ammunition in the fall of South Vietnam. The estimated $2 billion worth of serviceable equipment has helped to make the Communist regime in Vietnam the biggest military power in Southeast Asia, the officials point out. They also say that the Reds got about 940 naval ships and craft of various types as well as 1,750 armored vehicles and 42,000 trucks when South Vietnam collapsed in April of 1975.

This news item led to a review of our earlier commentaries on the Vietnam "War" from which the following have been selected for reprinting. The dates of original publication in The Social Crediter are given in brackets at the end of each commentary.

On May 20th a group of some three hundred people, led by about twenty interstate Protestant clergy, held a silent meeting before Parliament House, Canberra, to protest against apparent U.S.A. policy in Vietnam, and the Australian government's support of this policy. This would not be of much importance, except that it requires considerable arrangement, and thus points to the existence of an organisation on an interstate level; and that it conforms to similar protests all over the world.

It is quite likely that the fate of the world now depends on the outcome in Vietnam, and a major objective of the Communist conspiracy within and without the U.S. is to make an American collapse or withdrawal credible. American public opinion, which increasingly recognises the real issue, must be suitably prepared for an 'accident' which, one way or another, will render America's position untenable. And then, with the inevitable, and probably rapid collapse of the whole of Asia, there will seem to be no alternative to the negotiated surrender of America to Communism, or whatever name the Finance-Communist Conspiracy chooses to give its World Government over the enslaved populations of the globe—what are left of them after potential 'saboteurs' have been eliminated.

American Opinion, May 1965, carries an article, cast in the form of a story, which quotes quite extensively from official 'studies' of the problems of disarmament. For the most part these deal with the activities of the Disarmament Agency, whose duty is to prevent any possible re-armament, and even to detect any individuals or groups (including local administrations) who might be contemplating re-armament. The selection of types to be used for an international police force, and the methods to be used by the Agency in examining suspects, read like passages out of George Orwell's 1984. Yet these 'studies' have been prepared by quite prominent people.

There is little doubt that involvement, sometimes perhaps even unconscious involvement, in the ramifications of the conspiracy leads in many cases to mental aberration; an inability to perceive the real meaning and effect of what is proposed in the name of apparently noble objectives, such as World Peace. But others, of course, know well enough what it is all about. They know that the Conspiracy at this stage is more likely to succeed than to be defeated, and think themselves safer on the inside than the outside, no matter how much international "police brutality" may be involved in making that victory permanent. Not a few, of course, will be disillusioned, as were the original Bolsheviks in Russia. Idealists in particular are a menace to the inner core of the Conspiracy—those "less than four hundred men", all known to each other, and appointing their own successors—since, not grasping the real meaning and intention of the Conspiracy, they have their own personal hopes and ambitions, their own pictures of the world as it ought to be. They do not understand that the Conspiracy is made up of layer upon layer of deception and treachery.

The threat to Western civilisation is now palpable, and on every hand there are increasing signs of awakening and apprehension. The task is to focus public attention on the true cause of our disasters: Treason in high places. So now we have come to "one specific and material end"—the determined exposure of the Conspiracy. "The only effective force by which any objective can be attained is in the last analysis the human will, and if an organisation . . . can keep the will of all its component members focused on the objective to be attained, the collective power available is clearly greater than can be attained by any other form of association." (C. H. Douglas)

Everybody now knows that only the armed forces of the U.S.A. can at this stage possibly stop Communism. But what too few people understand is that the government which controls these forces is heavily penetrated by traitors, whose objective is to disarm the U.S. while keeping up the appearance of confrontation. And that is the vital fact on which public opinion must be focused, so that concentrated and informed public opinion may make further betrayal impossible, and then reverse the consequences of past treachery. There is a war on, and the Communists are winning it. But America could win, and America's government must be made to win. It was not Goldwater that the Conspiracy was afraid of—it was that their men in key positions were likely to be kicked out and exposed by re-activated Congressional Committees of Inquiry. It is not likely that another Goldwater will get another chance; but an informed public opinion would be more certainly effective than any Goldwater. An informed public opinion is our sole chance of survival at this stage.

It is true that the actual battle-front now lies in the U.S.A.; but traitors occupy high positions in every country, and are the cause of the mounting world disorder. Persistence in financial policies which keep us on the brink of economic disaster make the activities of traitors in other areas of government all the more fruitful, and promote the ever-increasing centralisation which is the mechanism of eventual world government. So that intensive exposure of the methods, and, so far as they are known, the personnel of the Conspiracy, is the order of the day. As Tom Anderson said in a speech to the American Association of Physicians and Surgeons: "There is a burgeoning grass roots rebellion developing in this country. Millions of alarmed and awakened Americans have now gone to work to save our Republic from becoming a Socialist-Union-Welfare dictatorship which is surrendering piece-meal to the Communist-dominated United Nations. . . . It won't be saved from the top down, but from the bottom up. . . ."

And as Douglas said in 1948: "If we are not faced with a long-term policy our position is quite hopeless. . . . But if we are facing a Satanic policy, our position, though very serious [it is desperately more serious today] is not necessarily irremediable. . . . Politics embody strategies; you do not fight strategies, you fight the human beings who are carrying out that strategy. . . . The best defence is attack. Do you propose to allow your enemy a monopoly of it? . . . If we grasp the fact that the essence of Communism, which is the politics of the World State, is centralised vesting of the planet in an organisation expropriating and cutting across all local and personal sovereignty, we cannot be much in error if we identify internationalists, open and concealed, with treason to the individual and his race and country. . . . It is faith which moves mountains. . ." (T.S.C., May 22, 1948)

(June 19, 1965)

The weekly news-paper, Human Events (Washington) in its issue for July 17, 1965, quotes what we believe to be the very reliable Allen-Scott Report on what took place at the Hanoi "labour conference" held from June 2-6 inclusive, and attended by delegates from all over the world. According to the Report, the conference cost the Hanoi-Peking axis over half a billion dollars.

"Nothing was left to the imagination of the 600 delegates. Country by country they were briefed on how to implement the 'vigorous mass aid Viet Nam and resist America movement' which the hosts said 'is unfolding throughout the world'. This labour conference obviously was vital to Mao's strategy." [Our emphasis.]

The conference was, in fact, a briefing in integrated sabotage as appropriate to the various countries represented, in the main aimed at disrupting transport and promoting anti-war demonstrations. And so we have seen the Teach-ins and other propaganda activities, combined with water-front strikes and other attacks on communications.

In the meantime, the U.S. refrains from bombing vital targets, but terrifies the public with postponed announcements of vastly increased military efforts—probably made in the secure knowledge that the Communists will have won before the efforts can be effective. The 'management' of the news concerning Vietnam ought to be enough to convince anyone of the complicity of the invisible government of the U.S.A. in the strategy of International Communism. And when our turn comes, it will be "too late" for the U.S. to do anything.

It is vital to do everything possible to inform public opinion to a point where it will force the U.S. government to win the war against Communism. Conferences with a winning enemy are merely steps in a pattern of surrender.

(Aug. 28, 1965)

A graph published in the London Times on March 31, 1966, showed that in mid-1965 British currency reserves (gold and foreign currencies less liabilities) fell below zero, from a fairly steady average up to mid-1964 of about £1,000 million. According to orthodox economic theory, therefore, British money is now completely without value. To maintain the fiction that it still has value, international loans have been obtained; but this means that Britain has lost the last vestige of even apparent power of independent initiative: Wilson is nothing but the broker's man. The fact that he enjoys the position (after all, it is a position), and exults in pursuing internationalist villainies, is irrelevant. Anyone occupying the same position would be under the same absolute orders, because Britain can be reduced to absolute economic chaos within 24 hours. Britain depends first of all on imports (unlike Rhodesia), and therefore an international declaration that sterling was no longer recognised as an international currency would deprive Britain of the ability to buy essential imports—food and oil. And, Mr. Wilson having conveniently set the example, it is undoubtedly true that any attempt to evade the economic sanctions which, of course, depend on economic orthodoxy, by recourse to unorthodox, but realistic, economics, would be met by the threat or use of international force. Bankrupts can be thrown into prison.

The present position has been implicitly true since World War I; but up till roughly the mid-thirties could have been rectified. Since the mid-thirties, rectification has become progressively less possible; but the fact that the final crash has come in less than a year (it began under the 'Conservative' administration, and has continued at the same rate under Labour), is a reliable indication that the time has come to demonstrate the reality of international government and power.

In the same way, it has been known for a long time that de Gaulle has been carrying out Communist objectives; but his now open destruction of NATO is simply the declaration that the conquest of Europe is complete.

All this would be painfully obvious to all people of reasonable intelligence who kept themselves informed of the main developments were it not for the operation of the greatest deception of the many current—that the U.S.A. is anti-Communist—a deception sustained undoubtedly by a degree of wishful thinking that closes the intellect to the acceptance of quite patent and elementary facts. Including U.S. economic aid (which is widely recognised to have done more harm than good), every U.S. strategic action has been in conformity with Communist objectives, even to open collaboration with the U.S.S.R. in the Suez crisis, which marked Britain's final military defeat. Let no one suppose that the U.S.A. is fighting Communism in Vietnam. We stated before it occurred that when the U.S.A. stepped up its military operations in that country it would be a sign that all possibility of a stable South Vietnamese government had been eliminated, so that, after a show of force, the Americans could declare the situation hopeless, and convincingly accept an invitation to leave the country. Now, only a few days ago, a B.B.C. Washington reporter stated that spokesmen for the U.S. administration privately admitted that the civil disturbances in Vietnam were restricting the American war effort and that they were concerned that a new government, including members of the Viet Cong, would be formed and would invite the U.S.A. to get out (leaving the huge American-built bases, and vast quantities of American military and other equipment, for the use of the Chinese in their conquest of Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, New Zealand and Australia). And what is left then for the U.S.A. but an 'accommodation' with the U.S.S.R. to set up a world government? The Australian Minister for External Affairs has just said, after his briefing in Washington, "the greatest problem facing the world is to persuade the Chinese to join the community of nations and live in peace with their fellow men", or words to that effect. Get it?

Will there be war? Yes, of course—against South Africa, unless that country capitulates before impossible odds.

(May 21, 1966)

Having demonstrated that over half a million U.S. military personnel, equipped with the most modern arms and support, and backed by the most intensive bombing in history, cannot prevent the North Vietnamese virtually over-running South Vietnam and wrecking the pacification programme, the U.S. Secretary for Defence has announced that it is now U.S. policy to hand over the major conduct of war to the South Vietnamese. Of course, as well as trading with the USSR and its East European satellites, who together supply 80% of North Vietnam's supplies, the U.S. has built bases and harbour facilities which will come in very useful to the Communists when the South Vietnamese civilian government collapses, which has clearly been the objective of the Co-Communists in Washington since before they connived in the murder of the Diems. Some sections of South Vietnamese cities, especially Saigon and Hue, have been reduced to rubble, and there are hundreds of thousands of refugees, thanks to American bombing. So the U.S. Administration will be able quite truthfully to say: "Look, with all we have done, the South has collapsed, and how can we now prevent the dominoes falling?"

Perhaps, in due course, Australia will have its port facilities bombed out of existence to prevent Communist landings. After all, Australia is paying an insurance premium of a few hundred dead to ensure American 'protection'.

(May 18, 1968)

The late C. H. Douglas described modern war as a prize-fight between A and B for the benefit of C, the promoter. The nigh incredible course of the Vietnam war, the official lies about its progress and prospects, its callous brutality where Americans bomb parts of South Vietnamese cities hopefully expecting to kill Viet Cong believed to be in them (never mind the civilians and their dwellings), the 'peace' talks which don't happen, make this war something worse than a prize fight. But whatever it is, it is clearly for the benefit of C—the Conspiracy. For the 'escalation' of the war has been made possible by American trade with Russia and the East Europe satellites, who supply 80% of North Vietnam's supplies.

According to twelve foremost U.S. ex-officers, including former chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, former chief of naval operations, former head of Strategic Air Command, and former head of Vietnam air operations, ". . . the war against North Vietnam can be irrevocably won in six weeks . . . Communist intimidations and aggressions in the free areas of Asia can also be struck a paralysing blow in the same brief frame of time. . . ." (Lloyd Mallan in Science & Mechanics, March 1968, reported in Human Events, March 23, 1968). Only mass media-backed official lies obscure the truth of this assessment.

The benefits to the Conspiracy include world-wide public confusion of thought, division of communities, distortion of the U.S. economy, the acceleration of 'civil rights' riots towards revolutionary civil war, world-wide student demonstrations, the building of bases in South Vietnam for eventual use for the policing of South East Asia by the Communists, and the hastening of universal economic crisis with any hope of a rational solution drowned in the confusion.

To grasp the enormities of the Vietnam 'war' is to comprehend the magnitude of the disaster which confronts us. The Conspiracy intends to rule the Earth forever, and in the pursuit of this objective ("the highest stakes in history") "the immolation of the peoples of a continent mean no more than the death of a sparrow".

Quiet Bloodbath in Southeast Asia

By SMITH HEMPSTONE

(From Human Events, Washington, D.C., Dec. 18, 1976)

Back in those bad old days when Nguyen Van Thieu was running South Vietnam, Lon Nol was in charge in Cambodia and Souvanna Phouma was the boss of Laos, not a single sparrow fell without arousing the horror and anger of a goodly claque of liberal American politicians, folksingers and pundits.

Not a Buddhist monk could immolate himself, not a truncheon could fall without drawing a pack of journalists eager to make the repressive nature of these pro-Western regimes known to the world.

And that was, of course, as it should be: the press has a duty to report injustice. But things are going on now in South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos that would make a statue weep. And we hear nary a peep about them.

The North Vietnamese, who are a little smarter than those who believed that Ho Chi Minh was just a grandfatherly nationalist who wanted to reunite his country, waited until May of this year to launch the bloodbath that liberals told us was just a figment of the conservative imagination.

All Western journalists, missionaries and diplomats were expelled from South Vietnam in that month. And the absence of witnesses made it ever so much more convenient for Ho's boys to get about their bloody work.

According to a recently published account by the deputy chief of Saigon's Communist administration, "more than 200,000" South Vietnamese have been sent to hoc tap "re-education" camps. Other estimates of the populations of these concentration camps run considerably higher.

It is not known how many people have died or been summarily murdered by kangaroo courts as the ultimate act of their "re-education." But escapees report that prisoners are kept on a near-starvation diet, and that many thousands have died of malnutrition, malaria, beriberi and dysentery.

Nor are these prisoners only army and police officers who fought against the Communists, although all of these—and civilian bureaucrats of the Thieu regime—have been hauled in. Also imprisoned are such potential subversives as journalists, poets, religious leaders of all persuasions and, ironically, former third-force leaders who once were persecuted by Thieu for advocating a negotiated settlement with the Communists.

Well over a million ordinary citizens who have not been confined to concentration camps have been forcibly removed from the cities and sent to clear the jungle in the so-called "new economic zones," a Gulag Archipelago in the interior without roads, medical facilities or wells.

So harsh are conditions in South Vietnam that more than 100,000 South Vietnamese have risked their lives to flee, sailing in small boats to Thailand (where they are not wanted) or escaping overland to that country through Cambodia. Many thousands—some say more than 50,000—have drowned, died of thirst or been shot in the attempt.

In Laos, a sleepy land with a population of only three million, an estimated 50,000 rightists and neutralists have been confined to similar camps. Perhaps another 200,000, including most of the country's few doctors, agronomists, lawyers and small businessmen, have fled across the Mekong River into Thailand.

But it is in Cambodia that Communist repression has reached truly charnel-house dimensions. Almost all the top and middle-grade officials associated with the Lon Nol regime are believed dead. That was, perhaps, to be expected.

But in a mindlessly brutal act worthy of a Stalin, Cambodia's faceless leaders have force marched between two million and 3.5 million of the country's seven million people from the cities to remote mountain areas. The sick, the halt, the blind and the pregnant were dragged from their houses. Each was allowed to take with him only what he could carry which, in many cases, literally meant only small children and elderly relatives.

Tens of thousands died along the roads from hunger and thirst. Others were murdered. Still more expired from overwork after they had reached their destinations. All were forced to take new names to make it difficult for the survivors of divided families to find each other again.

Nobody knows, or ever will know, how many died in this sadistic operation. Some say 500,000; others, one million. Given the differences in population, a slaughter of those dimensions in the U.S. would mean between 15 million and 30 million dead.

Some 22,000 Cambodians have managed to escape to Thailand. They report that there no longer is electricity in Cambodia, that no money circulates (there is nothing to buy, and it is forbidden to sell), that children are required to report any lack of revolutionary zeal on the part of their parents or playmates, and that the food ration is a cup of rice per day. So much for life in Cambodia's "purification zones."

All this, of course, is taking place far from the prying eyes of Western journalists, since neither they nor non-Communist diplomats are admitted to Cambodia.

Thieu, Lon Nol and Souvanna Phouma were flawed men who governed with heavy hands. But they were positively Jeffersonian in their humanity compared to the hard-eyed killers now in control of Southeast Asia. That knowledge comes a little late for those who must pay the price.

AN INTRODUCTION TO ZIMUNISM

It is of the greatest importance to recognise that presenting an incomplete case always affords an advantage to those who are in possession of one more comprehensive.

It must be obvious to very many people, particularly to the more senior, that this contemporary civilisation has suffered a catastrophic retrogression in the past 60 odd years, to go back no further. Sixty years represents two generations, and over that period education has steadily become more centralised, until it has more and more approximated to a system of indoctrination. There is what used to be a well-known saying, attributed to the Jesuits, to the effect: "Give us a child for its first seven years of its life, and others can have it after that".

But modern 'education' has gone further than that. Because of the movement of the generations, ideas implanted in the earliest years are "progressively" (the pun is intentional) developed through higher grades of 'education'. The universities have been targets of revolutionaries for a much longer period than sixty years; but the rate of change in the past fifty years is so fast as to be obvious to anyone who fifty years ago entered university.

This changing educational process is like painting a white wall red. The first small section looks like a stain on the white wall, and the task endless; but towards the end the whiteness looks like a stain on the red, and the end is clearly in view.

Now with the proliferation of the dogmas of 'political science', there has been an avalanche of books and articles on political and economic matters; but this avalanche is polemical rather than scientific, and as far as public opinion is concerned, is confusing rather than enlightening. The fundamental cause of this confusion is that the polemicists present incomplete cases. But this incompleteness is more and more one-sided – there are selective omissions as dogma supersedes fact.

The question is: Is there a cause for these omissions?

The review Zimunism is a compressed attempt to answer this question – but can only claim that while still an incomplete case, it makes good some vital omissions in current discussions. These concern in the main the actual operation of the monetary system and the activities of the operators; and the question as to what Benjamin Disraeli meant in his novel Coningsby (which expressly conveyed his own "suggestions") when he wrote: "So you see, my dear Coningsby, that the world is governed by very different personages from what is imagined by those who are not behind the scenes".

Zimunism is incomplete in the sense that a skeleton is incomplete in relation to a body. The works referred to in the text, together with many others, some of which are listed below as available from stock or by order from Tidal Publications in Australia and K.R.P. Publications in the United Kingdom, provide sufficient "flesh" to complete a body.

As for Mind, this is to be discerned in autobiographies, and statements of witnesses given in reports of judicial-type enquiries.

And finally, the nearer one comes to a comprehension of the complete 'case', the more conviction grows that there is indeed a "conscious, organised, Evil Purpose in the world." Any reader of Zimunism who is perplexed and concerned by the present and future state of the world should re-read this review after a few days, since the necessary compression of the treatment may make a first reading difficult to grasp.
